I, Sniper is the story of the Washington D.C. mass homicides, told for the first time from the unique perspective of the surviving shooter himself, Lee Malvo. For 23 days in 2002, just a year after 9/11, he and his accomplice John Muhammed terrorized the capital and gripped the nation, killing at random from the trunk of their blue Chevy Caprice.

Now, in this six-hour series, alongside the investigators, survivors and victims' families, Malvo recounts his story in a series of phone calls from his supermax cell at Red Onion State Prison in Virginia. From his childhood of deprivation in Jamaica to the murders in forensic detail, this is the definitive account of an iconic American crime story.
