On the great plains of Africa, predators must seize any opportunity to gain the upper hand. The cheetah and gazelle are natural opponents, both compelled by two profoundly embedded instincts; one to chase and the other—to flee.

This is the story of two fawns, living parallel lives—one, an Impala resident in the southern acacia forests, and the other, a Thompson's gazelle soon to be on the march with the great herds. Both must outrun the hunters to survive in a relentless and deadly contest—a race for life itself.

The young gazelles grow up learning about the threats that challenge all the creatures of the bush: big cats, jackals and hyenas. Over time, the fawns learn the ways and wiles of becoming mature gazelles—and stand proud as ones who have survived the perilous journey. Fawn Identity is a story of courage and instinct, of hope and desperation—all in East Africa, truly one of the most beautiful places on Earth.
