Zambia's Luangwa river hippos are living the easy life, or so it seems. Their life fluctuates between the serenity of sunbathing to the terrible brutality of dominance and aggression. This struggle puts a young hippo in more danger of being trampled by herd members than being hunted by the neighboring crocodiles. Crocodiles and hippos maintain a symbiotic truce, while male hippo clashes can have tragic consequences. In Hippo Supremacy, this reality is captured as a mother risks her safety to protect her struggling baby as it grows up in the danger-filled waters of the Luangwa River.
